

CHALFONT TROOP 1, BOY SCOUTS, WINS 6TH ANNUAL MEET, 4TH CONSECUTIVE TIME AT BIRTHDAY PARTY
IN DOYLESTOWN; 2 BRISTOL TROOPS WIN PLACES

Scouts Were Present From All Sections of the County and
It Was a Great Day for the Boys — Place Winners Are Listed—First Place Winners Declared Winners for 1933

The Bucks County Boy Scout Council celebrated its sixth birthday on Saturday at Doylestown. It was a great birthday party from the beginning of the scoutcraft meet at 3.30 until the stirring, and inspiring parade of colors at the conclusion of the rally in the evening. They came from all sections of the county to represent their seascout ships for older boys, scout troops for middle age boys, and cub packs for younger boys. It was certainly Bucks County's Day for its boys. Fellowship, comradeship, sportsmanship, and teamwork were evident at all times.

Chalfont No. 1, for three years Bucks County Championship Scoutcraft Troop, came through with a fourth consecutive victory. The boys and men from the neighboring community were united in taking home "the bacon." Every one did his assigned job in such a masterful way that it gave the three year old champions a fourth championship. Scoutmaster Ray Locke was ably assisted by Assistant Scoutmasters Gilbert Carlin, Walter Heffrich and Ronald Wilson. Chalfont fortunately has an exceptional troop committee of Chairman Harry Riebel, Al Wick, Wm. Angeny, Russell Hartzell, Peter Hellberg, Russell MacNair and former Scoutmaster Eagle Scout Kenneth Lane.

Perkasie No. 1 under Scoutmaster Clayton Pritchard took second place with Richboro led by Scoutmaster Gilbert coming through with the county third place. Other place winners were Bristol No. 1, Trevose No. 1, Riegelsville No. 1, Doylestown No. 2, Langhorne No. 1, Bristol No. 2, Quakertown No. 2, and South Perkasie No. 1.

Every individual was busy in keeping up with the four major contests that were running during most of the afternoon. At the Army, on the drill floor the Scoutcraft meet was being conducted. In the Army basement, the craftsmanship event occupied the attention of many. Through the co-operation of Burgess Hotchkiss Shewell Avenue was closed to permit the exhibition drill teams to compete in front of the Army. At the same time the appearance contest was in progress on the Doylestown High School grounds.

The evening program started with a moving picture show with Skipper Robert Brenner of Croydon as operator. There were four films, "Party on top of the world," "Lindberg's Paris Reception," "Swiss Cheese," and "Ancestral Gods."

Former Assistant United States District Attorney Mark Thatcher of Perkasie served as chairman of the evening rally. The songs of "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," and "We are, we are, we are, we are Bucks County Scouts" led by Scout Executive William F. Livermore soon had the audience happily anticipating the other parts of the program.

Four troops had prepared special stunts which filled the court house with peels of laughter, and smiling faces. Bristol No. 1 gave a laughing, and very humorous presentation of the troop dumb-bell known as the "Tenderfoot." Perkasie No. 1 took the life of the travelers of the open road, and soon had the audience laughing with their "No rest for the weary." "Where there's a will" by Milford was an excellent story of how the spirit of Scouting grips boyhood, and leads them on to outstanding endeavor. Various radio stars were mimicked by Quakertown No. 2 with their "Imitations."

Chairman of the Chalfont Troop Committee Harry Riebel presented as the gift from the Chalfont troop the 1933 Scoutcraft Championship Banner. Without council funds to purchase the banner it was unusually Scout-like for the Chalfont troop to come forward with their gift towards the success of the Boy Scout Day activities.

Announcement was then made by Scout Executive William F. Livermore of the 1933 Scoutcraft champions. Chalfont was presented with the 1933 banner by Chairman Mark Thatcher. This makes the fourth year straight for the victory to be won by this troop. In 1932, there was their only tie with Bristol No. 1.

Morrisville No. 2, Scoutmaster Paul Nichols gave a stunt, "Campers All" with Scouts seated around a lighted campfire, and greeting their neighboring farmer. The neighboring farmer in the person of Assistant Scoutmaster Harold Washburn played many old time tunes, and sang them to the enjoyment of the audience.

Cup awards were made by Chairman Mark Thatcher assisted by Scout Executive William F. Livermore. South Langhorne Pack No. 1 was presented with the Doylestown Rotary Club Pack Appearance Cup. Bristol No. 1 was presented with the Bristol Exchange Club Troop Appearance Cup. Ship Rainbow Clipper of Croydon earned the Quakertown Chamber of Commerce Ship Appearance Cup. Morrisville No. 2 was awarded the Bristol Rotary Club Stamp Cup for their excellence at Camp Buccoo.

Major Evans, president of the Delaware and Montgomery Counties Council was present as the representative of the Third Region Scout Headquarters to present the President Hoover Membership Growth Streamers. Five troops were outstanding in this achievement: Bristol No. 1, Perkasie No. 1, Hulmeville No. 1, Milford No. 1, and Quakertown No. 2. Major Evans reminded the scouts that they were members of a vast organization of nearly one million individuals in over fifty-five countries endeavoring to live up to their Scout Oath and Law. He remarked how happy we should all be to live in such lovely environment as was our county of Bucks. The streamers presented by President Hoover were attached to the respective flags amid the cheers of the spectators in the crowded court house. The program was concluded with massed colors being saluted with the pledge of allegiance, and the renewing of the Scout Oath.

Place winners in the Scoutcraft events during the afternoon had close competition in each contest. First place winners are known as Bucks County champions for 1933. Craftsmanship event: First, Fred Hellberg and Howard Ries, of Chalfont; second, William Betz and Francis Abbott, of Bristol No. 2; William Barndt and Hubert Reichley, of South Perkasie. BEGIN SEVENTH DAY IN SEARCH FOR AKRON

Surface Ships and Airplanes of Navy Determined to Find
The Dirigible

MAY TAKE ALL SUMMER

By Quentin Reynolds
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ABOARD U. S. S. PORTLAND, Apr. 10.—(INS)—Grimsly determined to find the wreck of the naval dirigible Akron, even if it takes all summer, a fleet of surface ships and airplanes of the U. S. Navy today began the seventh day of the long and weary search.

A score of swift seaplanes and amphibians from the Naval Flying Fields at Norfolk, Anacostia, and Philadelphia, roared out to sea at the crack of dawn to continue the search for bodies and wreckage, under the directions of Captain Leary of the U. S. S. Portland, which lies anchored 24 miles east of the New Jersey coast, near the spot where the Akron was believed to have crashed.

Captain Leary and Lieut. Commander Fisher, who have been on duty practically 24 hours a day ever since the search started, were encouraged yesterday by the finding of the bodies of Commander McCord and Commander Berry by the Coast Guard destroyer Tucker. A great deal of debris and wreckage also was found by other searching ships, and later last night the sleek gray shape of the Navy Destroyer Bernadou came along side the Portland to deliver a large duralumin alcohol tank, which Lieut. Commander Fisher identified as that of the Akron.

Later the destroyers Cole and Ellis loomed up out of the night to report they had picked up several pieces of wreckage, including some sleeping bags, a large piece of planking, a pillow and a section of a ventilator pipe.

The search today was aided by a calm sea.

SPRING ASSEMBLY,
P. T. A., ATTENDED
BY 175 MEMBERS

Dr. K. E. Appel Addresses
The Group at Newtown
High School

HAVE TWO SESSIONS

Oak Tree Dedicated to County
Superintendent J. H.
Hoffman

NEWTOWN, April 10.—That "we must train for the wise use of leisure" was one of the main thoughts given in the address of Dr. Kenneth E. Appel, of the Institute of Pennsylvania Hospital, before those gathered for the ninth Spring Assembly of the Parent-Teacher Associations of the Bucks County Council, Pa. Congress of Parents and Teachers, in the high school building here Saturday.

Dr. Appel's address was one of the splendid features of the afternoon program. His subject was "Education and Mental Health," and his speech included the admonition to "Learn nature of the physical and social world," he stating that "the social world is achieved through the adaptive process." The physician continued, "In former times the physical world has always been emphasized, and now the learning of the social world is being emphasized more and more. In the social world success and happiness depend more on wisdom and practical knowledge than on text book knowledge. We must train for the wise use of leisure. Children get habits and attitudes from homes and friends; the adult job is hard; parents build the way for their children."

There were two sessions, 10 a. m., and 1.45 p. m.

The assembly singing was led by Mrs. George Shock, music chairman of the Council. The Rev. Jacob Long, a local pastor, made the invocation, and led in prayer. Dr. William A. Roberts, president of Newtown board of education, welcomed those present. In his remarks he emphasized by use of statistics the comparison of increase in government expenditures, and found the educational department received the lowest increase. "We are undergoing times of readjustment, and this will be a better world when this is accomplished, for people are becoming more and more interested in the finer things of life." Assistant county superintendent of public schools, Charles Boehm, Morrisville, responded to the welcome. Mr. Boehm said that school boards will have to select the imperative things to accomplish the readjustment referred to. He commended the timely topic of the assembly's program, "Physical Health and Mental Hygiene," adding that too many people feel that the health program in the school is an unnecessary "fixing." He said that "if cuts are to be made in the curriculum, some of the old subjects should be eliminated."

Mrs. A. C. Mammel, president of Newtown P. T. A., greeted the assembly.

Four members of Morrisville P. T. A. gave a playlet, "What the School Can Do to Help the Child." This stressed the physical, social and cultural points as developed through organized games, banking, clubs, choral and orchestra work in the schools, which develop the child, giving him a wider range of lofty desires, and a means to satisfy those desires.

Mrs. C. C. Campbell, president of Southeastern District of the Pa. Congress of Parents and Teachers, developed the subject, "The Summer Round-Up," very definitely, saying, "The child grows wonderfully, both physically and mentally, the first six years. We can't begin too soon to guard this development for physical health and mental safety."

The necessity of a school nurse is vital; organize a clinic for summer round-up; use every effort to correct the defects before a child begins school. Start the child right. It is our responsibility. The children are the builders of our nation. Build well."

Mrs. J. A. Flood, New Hope, is chairman of the summer round-up.

Emphasis was made by Dr. C. W. Many, county medical director, on the right start in school for the child, with the best of health, not handicaps such as bad teeth, diseased tonsils, weak eyes, etc. "School nursing is an investment, it is better than any insurance."

Mrs. P. H. Moore, Abington, Montgomery County Council, urged the Bucks Assembly to form child study circles, with the aim to develop parenthood. "Organize this group through the P. T. A.," she said. "How to conduct this depends on the degree to which the members are educated; informal for the less educated group."

It was suggested that such meetings might be held in the homes of members, or at school. "Avoid discussion of a particular child in the community; discuss as abstract types," was the admonition.

The annual tree planting and dedication occurred. Mrs. Louise White Watson, Fallsington, chairman of this committee, gave an interesting talk on the purpose of planting the oak tree, the emblem of the P. T. A., telling of its untiring growth from a small acorn, always stretching upward, grasping to help others—"so like the oak stands Mr. J. H. Hoffman, county superintendent."

ARNWINE SENTENCED TO LIFE TERM IN JAIL

Doylestown, Apr. 10.—As his two sisters wept bitterly, Charles Arnwine, 25 year old "Village Romeo" today was sentenced to life imprisonment in solitary confinement for the slaying of Frances Rempfer, 15 year old high school sophomore and church organist.

Deciding not to gamble on a chance of another trial with a possible verdict of death in the electric chair, Arnwine's counsel, J. Leslie Kilcoyne, withdrew his formal motion for a new trial.

President Judge Hiram Keller pronounced sentence.

Mrs. Helen Sargent and Mrs. Mable Heller, Arnwine's two sisters, broke down completely as sentence was passed. Mrs. Heller collapsed and was revived in a corridor of the Court House.

Arnwine heard his sentence without emotion. He was taken to the Bucks County jail to prepare for immediate departure for the Eastern Penitentiary. He bade his two sisters a last farewell at the jail here.

The girl was found slain, her body secreted under a mattress, a few days after her father had filed statutory charges against Arnwine.

To the last Arnwine maintained the girl killed herself in a suicide pact which he lacked the courage to consummate.

ARSON SUSPECT IS UNDER ARREST FOR COUNTY BARN FIRES

Prisoner Taken to Scene of Blazes But Gives Conflicting Answers

DOUBT HIS MENTALITY

Man Gives Name of John Jan-koski, 48, With No
Home

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 10.—A suspect in the numerous incendiary fires in Bucks County is being held here and being closely questioned by the authorities. He gives the name of John Jankoski, 48, farm hand.

Jankoski was taken into custody Saturday on the Dolington road, about two miles north of Newtown. He stated he has no permanent home and intimated that he had been in the vicinity of several of the barns which have recently been burned. He also admitted he had served a term in the Mercer County Workhouse.

Jankoski accompanied Fire Marshal William L. Stackhouse, and State Trooper Harold Dando to several of the ruins of burned barns. He said he remembered having slept overnight in some of the buildings, but many of his answers were not responsive. Authorities express doubt concerning his mental capacity.

In some instances, Jankoski declared that the fires had been due to lightning while others were attributed to a discarded cigarette. Asked how he possessed such information, his remarks turned to other topics.

At the scene of a barn fire on the property of Conrad Weimert, near Langhorne, where a $6,000 loss was sustained last February 21, the suspect claimed that he was in the Workhouse at that time. A few minutes later, he said he saw the ruins when he walked down a nearby road on the following morning. He also told of having slept in barns in the vicinity of Lambertville and Allentown, N. J.

Officials say that Jankoski was held on suspicion of arson on a previous occasion but later released. He has also been arrested for vagrancy.

Fire Marshal Stackhouse estimates, conservatively, the losses in barn fires during the past year to be $150,000. Most of the barns broke out between midnight and 4 a. m. and are believed to have been almost entirely of incendiary origin.

Other owners who sustained barn fire losses, whose places were visited in the preliminary checkup with Jankoski, are: Horace Tomlinson, Newtown, fire on March 4, $14,000 loss; John Wendisman, Woodside, March 4, $8,000; Edward Papendick, on Bridge-town Road, March 31, $12,000 loss; William B. Wood, Newtown Borough, May, 1932, $5,000 loss; Styer Bros., Woodbourne Road, June 3, 1932, $6,000, and Potashnick Bros., Buck Road, near Langhorne, August, 1932, $22,000 loss.

WORTHY CAUSES SUFFER

One of the distressing features of the depression that has received but slight attention was brought out at the biennial conference of the committee on financial and fiduciary matters of the Federal Council of Churches.

Because of the great shrinkage in estates, many institutions, including churches, are liable to feel the effects of the depression long after the latter is ended. One speaker, Leroy A. Mershon, a former official of the American Bankers' Association, estimated that 75 per cent of public bequests written into wills in the last 25 years either have been taken out of the wills or never will be paid because of the decline in security values and other effects of the depression.

"Literally, hundreds of thousands of persons," he said, "who, in the days before 1929, were glad to incorporate bequests for institutions, have refused to do so in the last three years. Hundreds of thousands of others have made changes in their wills, taking out all bequests to institutions, because losses sustained security and property values left just enough to take care of their families. This represents at least 75 per cent of the people of this country."

The institutions that will suffer include hospitals, colleges and social and welfare organizations of various kinds.

The possibility that some of these losses may be made up by annual donations from persons able to make them when prosperity returns offers some hope. Full compensation, however, is unlikely, and the activities of the institutions affected necessarily will be restricted. In some cases, at least, serious injury to most worthy causes will result.

THE NONADVERTISER

The nonadvertiser and the experimenter have a hard time. They are out of luck. They try to run a business of some sort on mere chance, and chance is a poor partner.

This town—any town—has seen them come and go like butterflies that come in late in the spring and go out early in the fall. They are summer visitors. They belong to the tourist class of business men. A short, fiftful spell and then like Longfellow's fleeting cares: "They fold their tents like the Arabs And as silently steal away."

They seem to say to the public: "Our goods are here and here we are to sell them"; only they don't say it to the public so that they are heard, nor does the public see it in print. The nonadvertiser only imagines things.

If they would let the local newspaper tell it to the public all would be very different, and after a while the transient store would very likely become a permanent concern.

Japan will fight disarmament if it takes the last Chinaman.

Another way to reduce is to avoid dentists until you have only two teeth that collide.

Well, what if little Willie does swear? Maybe he is showing signs of becoming a great dramatist.

By Louise White Watson

Long Ago

Do you remember, oh, years ago, how we gathered in that old court room at Doylestown, during the week of teachers' institute, and listened to the literary and educational feasts that were brought to us by talent gathered from the outside world? Reminiscently, one lives over those days and pictures the room in sunny brightness, so much so at times, that the janitor went softly from window to window closing blinds wherein the sun was too pronounced in its visits, or the rainy days, and there were many of them, when he slowly lighted one lamp at a time in that chandelier, many eyes turned to watch the proceedings? There will come a day when some bright brain, now lying dormant, will brush the cobweb from the key-hole, turn the key, and then one will hear through the opened entrance, songs and stories of other days reproduced by some wonderful invention that is even now, wondering at the slow process of procedure. There will be such records that will gladden and sadden; records that will bring vividly to mind, things long forgotten. The court room is talking. Miss Field is introduced.

Miss Field

Who can forget that evening when she, the daughter of the poet loved by all, stood before us, gowned all in black, and gave loving instances in her father's life, shortened by the years for some purpose. Silence followed his love-son of childhood and the world was a heavy loser. Field, lovingly called "the children's poet," she came just at the time her father's memory was being honored at the unveiling, in Chicago's marble Hall of Fame, in Lincoln Park, of a monument dedicated to him and for which the children of Chicago raised $10,000. One recalls her, standing so alone before that large audience, a spirit of youth, depicting the life of her father and reciting some of his poems, the poems that appealed to his readers of all ages, they touched child-life so beautifully.

Contrastship

She was one with her father as she recited, "Have you ever heard of the Sugar Plum Tree?" 'Tis a marvel of great renown. It blooms on the shore of the lollipop sea, in the garden of Shut Eye Town." Brock's orchestra was seemingly wasting its sweetness on the desert air, so astray was the audience, waiting for the second part of this pleasing program and hoping she would not finish without giving us "Little Boy Blue."

After-Part

Again she appeared and again she carried us so pleasingly through fields of rhythmic measure and meadows that joyed with them. One dreamily wandered back to childhood. And then we heard given, oh, so pathetically: "The little toy dog is covered with dust, But sturdy and staunch he stands; And the little toy soldier is red with rust, And his musket molds in his hands."

Yes, we all heard the choke in her voice as she finished. She told us later, at the breakfast table, she had tried and tried in vain to overcome that choking sensation that overwhelmed her when reciting that particular poem, but without success. She said it seemed a very part of her father and how he had told them his heart ached when picturing Little Boy Blue passing on so quietly and leaving his toys behind. We assured her there were so many Little Boy Blues all over the court room and that we were living so close with him that we, too, felt the sting of tears and the clutch at the throat in loving sympathy. One recalls yet how softly her voice trailed into silence, and with the slightest inclination of the head, she left us for the side room. Even the orchestra registered a pause as though loath to intrude into the sacred atmosphere, created by the master child touch of Eugene Field and reproduced so effectively by his daughter. She related her reason for always leaving "Little Boy Blue" to the last was caused by the great homesickness she ever felt for her father and which was almost unbearable.

Lullaby

It is claimed millions of children have been lulled into slumber-land by Eugene Field's poems, and the statue unveiled to this child lover portrays a brooding angel hovering over two sleeping children, sprinkling the sand of dreams into their eyes. Beneath, on one side of the memorial, are carved the first four lines of the Dutch lullaby, better known as "Wynken, Blynken and Nod," and on the other side of the sleeping figures are the lines of the Sugar Plum Tree. Modest as the reader, daughter of the heavenly-gifted father, is the inscription, "To Eugene Field."

Only Forty-Five

This man with the whisperings of angels that have entered homes of the merry, of the sad, of the lonely, was only forty-five when he, too, left his toys of life and his loved ones to answer the call no one disobeys. But he lives today in his gingham dog and the calico cat that ate each other up after a terrible duel, and the boy who was always "seen" things at night. In 1917 the original copy of his Little Boy Blue sold for $2,400. Field's talent for writing was many-sided. He had the ability to write by turns the quaint, the sentimental, the humorous, the pathetic. He is described as having a most engaging personality, boyish gaiety, enthusiastic love for children and animals and a capacity for friendship. Passing on in 1895, he left so much to enrich the world, for the world is but a lot of homes and in most of the homes childhood dwells, and Field ever dwells with childhood. And ever runs the thread of loneliness through his poems. Take "With big tin trumpet and little red drum, Marching like soldiers the children come! . . . This way and that way, and after a while, they march right straight into this heart of mine." And then at the close of the poem he says, "Ah me! but a love that is sweeter than mine holdeth my boy in its keeping today! And my heart is lonely—so little folk come, March and make merry with trumpet and drum."

BEHIND the SCENES in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL.

Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD. — As every feminine eye in Hollywood is focused on Easter fineries, Hedda Hopper cracks

Filmiland's serenity by a sensational resumption of the old argument as to who are the best dressed women in the motion picture colony.

Hedda, a chic dresser herself, names Co-stance Bennett, Joan Crawford and Kay Francis.

But what the gossips will do on, she takes a sharp dig at Marlene Dietrich and Lillian Tashman.

Says Hedda: "Both Miss Dietrich and Miss Tashman have chosen bizarre styles to attract attention to themselves. To me, it has always seemed possible to be an actress without carrying the theatre around on your back."

"I think Lillian is one of the most amusing people I know, but I believe she dresses in too flamboyant a manner. Where some women wear one, or two, diamond clasps, she wears four. Of course, it may be jealousy on my part. I have only one diamond clasp and it is so small you could put it in the corner of your eye."

"Miss Dietrich," continued Hedda, "has carried the trousers far too far. It will be a boomerang to her. She lays herself particularly open to the charge of bad taste when she dresses her little girl in masculine fashion."

It is Bill Rankin who tells the story of the New York writer who was so bitter over a studio experience that he could see nothing good about Hollywood.

One evening there was a fire on the boulevard and the department went clanging by.

"Snappy work, isn't it," observed a bystander.

"Yah," said the writer, "in New York they come back faster than that."

HOLLYWOOD PARADE.

Ann Harding is writing a book and you may be able to help her. She is asking all who knew her father, the late General George Grant Catley, to send her any human interest stories about his career. Her book is to be his biography, written in episodic style, and containing many of her childhood memories of life in army camps. Ann is writing it between picture assignments. She'll do several chapters as soon as she finishes "When Ladies Meet" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Though George Bernard Shaw turned down John Barrymore's request for an autograph for his daughter, the British writer cheerfully signed his name on a 10 gallon hat belonging to Cecil Holland, M-G-M makeup man. Holland's hat already contained the autographs of many Hollywood celebrities. . . . Remember Gladys McConnell, wampus baby star of a few years back? She is Mrs. A. Ronald Burton now, and she is expecting a visit from the stork in a few months.

They'll tell you that Merna Kennedy and Busby Berkeley, the dance director, will be honeymooning at the Chicago world's fair. . . . And that was Alexander Kirkland who took Joan Crawford dancing at the Beverly Wilshire. . . . Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler are off to Hawaii on the same boat with the Pat O'Brien, the Frank Borzages and several other film folk. . . . In addition to her scenario work, Stella Bloch is a talented artist and an authority on Japanese dances. She's having an exhibition here next week. "Harlem Dances" is her present subject.

The puppet club, made up of 20 members of the film younger set, is giving a dinner dance at the Roosevelt tonight in honor of Anita Loos, a who leaves for a trip to Europe. Billie Burke and Alexander Leftwich, honorary members, are attending. This club recently rented a house in Hollywood where they'll have tennis courts and a place for weekly dances.

And did you hear Roy Del Ruth's simile: "As unwanted as a glass of near beer on April 7."

STRANDS, STRIPES TO MAKE SUMMER'S FURS MORE ATTRACTIVE

Spiral Effects Are One of The Latest "Wrinkles" In Such

By Alice Langellier

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—Spring furs are stranded, but of course we're not referring to any deserted islands. Striped and spiral effects are the newest ones shown by leading French furriers who are bound to keep warm skins on the women despite the temperature.

Strands and stripes make summer scarves and muffs most effective in coloring. A scarf striped diagonally in putty and nigger ermine has a muf to match in spiral effect.

A suntan set in real broadtail is dyed in the same tones and a charming ensemble is made up of little cape, muf and fur gauntleted chamois gloves in rose du Barry and black ermine.

Moleskin comes worked with an insertion of narrow bands of black seal-skin, giving it long and graceful lines. The bluish-grey tint of the mole accentuated by the alternate strands of glossy jet-black, is exceptionally becoming to the brunette.

A mole and seal model for spring has the new "poche" sleeve. A long diagonal cut in the fur fashioned from the bend of the arm in front to the elbow-line forms a pocket in the top sleeve, while the under part remains quite plain, the cuff being narrow at the wrist.

A high roll-collar is cut on one-sided lines, with the left back overlapping the right side.

Even Worth, always partial to very large fur collars, generally fox, is leaving them off most of his spring coats, but this by no means signifies that the fur collar passes.

It is such a good background for the face that it will certainly not be kept on the shelf very long, except, perhaps, for pressing economical purposes.

This dressmaker, however, does make use of fine fur for some cunning little sleeves on tiny jackets.

YORK—(INS)—A hen who refuses to "work" unless enjoying comfortable quarters is the prize member of the flock of Earl Mundie, Windsor Township farmer.

Early in the autumn, when chilly breezes were sweeping through the henhouse, the chicken found a cozy corner in the basement of the Mundie dwelling to lay her eggs. And now, when the hen finds the basement door closed, she taps with her beak until someone opens the door and permits her to enter.

ALL OVER NOW BUT THE OPENING DAY

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, April 10.—(INS)—It's all over now but the bluster and uproar of opening day, with its touch of pageantry and strident color and the old bromide having something to do with mortality among grandmothers.

The spring training thing is out of the way. So are those necessary antics in connection with the exhibition game. Sixteen major league ball clubs are on the scene with nothing to do but wait for Wednesday's opening and the moment when illusion vanishes and reality begins.

By this time next week, we'll know a few things we only vaguely suspect now. But today, they're all equal, at least technically or theoretically. However, the price-makers, who are neither technical nor theoretical, have introduced a practical note by making the world's champion Yankees a 2 to 5 choice in the American League, the shortest price of the last twenty years. Jack Doyle is the man who stands behind these figures. Mr. Doyle may even stand away behind these figures if the Yanks don't win.

The Pittsburgh Pirates are 2 to 1 in the National League, with the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals at 2½, according to the last quotations from Tom Kearney out in St. Louis.

The Pirates are something of a general choice in all books but it's almost anybody's foot race and you can figure almost anybody to win, except maybe the Braves and Reds. This pair is held at 15 and 20 to 1, respectively, with the Dodgers and Phillies at 6 and the Giants at 3. That's hardly a lavish price against an outfit so unbalanced that you could shoot a cannon through the club house without hitting a pitcher.

There is an equal lack of balance with the Cards, who lose Gelbert for the season and probably won't get ten cents on the dollar out of Hornsby. As for the Cubs, the beating they took from the Yankees last October, plus the loss of Cuyler and the encroaching years of Mr. Charles Grimm make them look like a club that is about to subside, gracefully and with abrupt finality. You have to like the Cardinals' pitching, of course, but there's one thing to be said about that. Mr. Street may have eight good pitchers but he can only pitch one at a time. That price of Mr. Doyle's against the Yankees may yet arise to mock his peace of mind and deride his dreams. The New York club has the pitching and the power but the defense that stayed with it for one, final fling at the pennant and world's championship last year is about to falter and lose its stride. Ruth is really at or near the end this time. Sewell is not far away. As for Corns, he has been chasing over the outfield so much of recent years that his legs have started to buckle and his shoes are practically spats.

Altogether, the Yanks barely look good for another year, if that. For one thing, the Athletics have great pitching again and that juvenile outfield of Mr. Cornelius Mack seems to be no figment of a doddering imagination. For another, the entire league is stronger, with the Senators having a real chance and most of the others at least a look in.

In speaking of increased strength, we can note an exception in the case of the Indians. They apparently are no better and I should say it is worth mentioning that for four years they haven't been quite good enough.

TORONTO, April 10.—(INS)—With two straight victories under their belts, the New York Rangers today were top-heavy favorites to wind up the hockey "world series" in tomorrow night's game with the Toronto Maple Leafs and take the Stanley Cup back to the States.

Although Connie Smythe, Toronto manager, predicted the defending champions would win three straight, local fans were about ready to concede defeat.

If the Blue Shirts are triumphant, they will be the first third-place club to win the cup in the history of the play-offs.

BABY ARIZMENDI PRESENT MEXICAN RING IDOL WHO FAILED TO WIN THE FEATHER TITLE FROM FREDDIE MILLER LAST MONTH—

NO MEXICAN FIGHTER HAS EVER WON A TITLE!

Joe RIVERS CAME CLOSEST --IN THAT FAMOUS DOUBLE K.O. WITH WOLGAST!

THE TITLE BIDS OF HERRERA AND COLIMA FAILED—

MEXICAN FIGHT FANS ARE RABID--THEY WILL BET ALL THEY OWN ON THEIR IDOLS.

BATTLING SHAW--A MEXICAN, BEAT JADICK FOR THE JR. WELTER CROWN RECENTLY--BUT THAT DIVISION IS NOT GENERALLY RECOGNIZED.

THE MAN who could sell more life insurance than any man I ever heard of never shouted. Notice the men who hold the records for selling...they just talk in a quiet easy way.

It's like this: Chesterfields just go along in their own quiet way making friends from day to day.

There's no noise about it, no "back talk."

The Chesterfield slogan—just two words, "They Satisfy"—is a plain simple statement telling about Chesterfield's merits.

It means that Chesterfields are milder—they taste better.

REMEMBER old Aurelio Herrera, that terrific-belted lightweight who was stretching 'em out on the canvas along about 1900? Well, old Aurelio started it all as far as the Mexican fight public is concerned.

Herrera was the first ringman from the land of the hot tamale to attain real fight prominence. His success made fight fans out of thousands of Mexicans, and injected the boxing virus into the blood of many Mexican youths, who were attracted by the glamor—and the greenbacks—of a leather-pushing career.

Just as Aurelio was hanging up his gloves, another great Mexican warrior started on the road to ring glory. He was a lean, almost frail-looking kid, but in the ring those thin, tawny arms would lash out in a furious flurry of blows that sent many an opponent crashing into the resin.

Joe Rivers was his name, and he was robbed of his chance to win the lightweight crown by one of the most outrageous actions ever perpetrated by a biased referee. I am referring, of course, to the famous bout between Rivers and Ad Wolgast, which ended in a double knock-out, with Referee Jack Welch holding up Wolgast with one hand while he counted Rivers out—and this in spite of the fact that the bell rang at the count of eight!

Bert Colima, a good middleweight, was the next Mexican ring idol. Bert's title dreams were blasted when Mickey Walker ironed him out in the seventh heat of their title bout back in 1925.

Just at present, however, there are more good Mexican glove-throwers in the fight limelight than ever before. Baby Arizmendi, rip-tearing featherweight flash, is a tremendous favorite with Mexican fans. The Baby failed to win Freddie Miller's N. B. A. feather crown when they clashed at Los Angeles last month, but he looked the better fighter of the two in dropping the verdict to Pete Rilly's southpaw. Arizmendi's trouble is that he does too much coasting and fights only in spurts. Whenever he opens up in the Miller fight, the Cincinnati sharpshooter was helpless before his furious onslaughts.

A sensational new Mexican lightweight, who is said to pack a wallop like old Herrera, is creating quite a stir in New Orleans rings. He hails from Texas and goes by the name of Battling Shaw. Shaw has some sort of claim to the trick junior welterweight title, as a result of winning a decision over Johnny Jadick some time ago, but that division doesn't mean anything.

The Texas Mexican chilled clever Joe Ginnouly with one punch—a right to the whiskers—in the ninth round. What the fight game needs now is punchers, and it looks like this fellow Shaw has what it takes.
